Trechispora cohaerens

Figures 1–7

Sporotrichum cohaerens Schwein. 1832 [3 : 272] ≡ Trechispora cohaerens (Schwein.) Jülich & Stalpers 1980 [2 : 257]

Basidiome effused, fragile, soft, loosely adherent to separable.

Hymenophore finely granulose, sometimes slightly colliculose, discontinuous to continuous and pellicular, separable from the subiculum, fragile when dried, whitish to cream or very pale yellow, turning pale yellow when dry.

Subiculum loose, araneose to byssoid, whitish.

Margin often sterile, thinning out and finely fibrillose or fertile and abrupt.

Rhizomorphs normally present at the margin, in cracks of the substrate or in subiculum, up to 0.1 (0.3) mm thick, white.

Hyphal system monomitic; all hyphae with fibulate primary septa, thin-walled, hyaline. Subhymenial hyphae richly branched, mostly regular, sometimes triangular or isodiametric, (2) 2.5–4.5 (8) in diam. Subicular hyphae and of rhizomorphs (1.5) 2–4 (4.5) µm wide, often ampullate at the septa up to 10–16 µm.

Cystidia absent.

Basidia more or less clavate to short cylindrical or slightly botryose, 10–15×4.5–5.5 (6) µm; 4 sterigmata up to 3.5–4 µm long.

Basidiospores lacrymoid, obovoid, in lateral view with a flattening adaxial side, (2.5) 3–4 (4.2)×2.4–3 (3.2) µm, Q = (1.05) 1.1–1.35 (1.45), smooth, with thickening to thick wall.

Chemical reactions: IKI–; CB: spores slightly cyanophilous.

Incrustation: infrequent to common, often as aggregates or pairs of lancet-like crystals with acuminate tips, rod-like with furcate apex or as irregular plates with fringed margins.
